THE GANTT GOLDEN YEAR • 1974-2024

Celebrating 50 Years

Harvey B. Gantt Center for African-American Arts + Culture marks its 50th anniversary in 2024 with the Gantt Golden Year, a yearlong celebration of Black joy, genius, and excellence. This celebration trumpets the Gantt's fifty-year evolution from an idea of two University of North Carolina at Charlotte professors in 1974, Dr. Bertha Maxwell-Roddey and Dr. Mary Harper, to the luminous institution at Levine Center for the Arts in Uptown Charlotte.

Powerful works by exceptional Black artists from the region and around the globe will be on view at the Gantt during 2024. Art exhibitions will include celebratory opening and closing events; artist visits and talks; student tours; and panel discussions with national and local artists, curators, and art enthusiasts.

In the spirit of the Gantt's mission and vision, celebrating this landmark year will ignite community engagement, while exhibiting the contributions of the Gantt to the arts and cultural landscape of the Charlotte region.

The Gantt Golden Year will feature a series of premier performances and events, exceptional exhibitions, and outstanding programs across five arts and cultural pillars including Dance, Afro-Culinary Foodways, Literary Talks and Community Forums, Art Exhibitions, and Music.

A Superlative Palette brings together the work of twelve generation-defining, contemporary Black women artists from around the world. In the realm of contemporary art, the contributions of Black women artists have been transformative, challenging traditional narratives, and enriching the cultural landscape. Their powerful and thought-provoking work has not only redefined artistic expression, but has also played a significant role in advocating for social justice, equality, and empowerment. Black women artists have historically faced marginalization and underrepresentation within the art world. Despite these obstacles, they have persevered and crafted an artistry that encompasses a diverse range of themes, mediums, and styles.

THE ARTISTS

Combining representation and abstraction, Nina Chanel Abney's paintings capture the frenetic pace of contemporary culture. Broaching subjects as diverse as race, celebrity culture, religion, politics, sex, and art history, her works eschew linear storytelling in lieu of disjointed narratives. ruby onyinyechi amanze composes drawings that defy the two-dimensional bounds of paper. Her objects float across the pages, untethered by indicators of gravity, space or time. All the forms are free from the restrictions of land; all sense of directionality is lost and they are light and unbounded.

Lauren Halsey is rethinking the possibilities for art, architecture, and community engagement.

Halsey's work maintains a sense of civic urgency and free-flowing imagination, reflecting the lives of the people and places around her and addressing the crucial issues confronting people of color, queer populations, and the working class. In her paintings, Rachel Jones grapples with the challenges of finding visual means to convey abstract, existential concepts. The figures in her work are notably abstracted and Jones uses bold color, competing forms, and an interplay of textures to communicate her ideas to viewers, who bring their own experiences and cultural backgrounds to the interpretation of her works.

Interested in the topography of skin, Toyin Ojih Odutola has a distinctive style of mark-making using only basic drawing materials, such as ballpoint pens, pencils, pastels, and charcoal. This signature technique involves building up of layers on the page, through blending and shading with the highest level of detail, creating compositions that reinvent and reinterpret the traditions of portraiture. Jennifer Packer's paintings are rendered in loose line and brush stroke using a limited color palette, often to the extent that her subject merges with or retreats into the background. Suggesting an emotional and psychological depth, her work is enigmatic, avoiding a straightforward reading.

The paintings of Calida Rawles merge hyper-realism with poetic abstraction. Situating her subjects in dynamic spaces, her recent work employs water as a vital, organic, multifaceted material, and historically charged space. Deborah Roberts focuses her gaze on Black children—historically, and still today, among the most vulnerable members of our population—investigating how societal pressures, projected images of beauty or masculinity, and the violence of American racism conditions their experiences growing up in this country as well as how others perceive them.

The formal and conceptual aspects of Tshabalala Self's work seek to expand her critical inquiry into selfhood and human flourishing. The figures in her work take up space on large pieces of paper or colorful canvases and seem to be caught in private, joyous moments: dancing with a lover, reclining on a bed, greeting a friend. Subverting the genre of portraiture and challenging accepted notions of American identity, Amy Sherald attempts to restore a broader, fuller picture of humanity. Sherald's work thus foregrounds the idea that Black life and identity are not solely tethered to grappling publicly with social issues, and that resistance lies equally in a full interior life and an expansive vision of selfhood in the world.

Mickalene Thomas introduces complex notions of femininity and challenges common definitions of beauty and aesthetic representation. Her work stems from her long study of art history and classical genres of portraiture and landscape. Lynette Yiadom-Boakye creates fictional figures that are untethered to a specific time or place, and are born from various untraceable subjects: people, objects, thoughts, photographs, or images she has drawn, observed, or recalled. This lack of fixed narrative reference leaves her work open to the projected imagination of the viewer.

CURATED BY LEANDRA-JULIET KELLEY

MAY 24 - SEPTEMBER 22, 2024

qualeasha Wood: code_anima explores identity, physical and digital boundaries, and the process of individuation through analysis of complex and socially accepted paradoxes. Defined as “an individual’s true inner self,” anima serves as a leitmotif in Wood’s introspective work, which examines the archetypes found within physical and digital societies.

Wood’s technical skills are evident in the digital collages of her tapestries as well as the colorful scenes of her hand-made tuftings. The materiality of these textiles (the warp and weft) are embedded with a “code,” serving as a symbol for the inner workings of the dual experiences felt by Black people, particularly Black women, as well as the multifaceted online identities that mirror or oppose our physical existence.

REFLECTIONS FROM THE ARTIST

In code_anima, my exploration delves into the complexities of identity, expectation, and erasure through the prisms of race, gender, and sexuality. This exhibition is a critical examination of the roles historically ascribed to Black women, which demand both a resolution to systemic issues and the simultaneous stripping of personal autonomy and agency.

This body of work draws inspiration from the concept of deus ex machina – a narrative device that introduces an unexpected, external force to resolve a complex situation. This device allows us to highlight the paradoxical position of Black women in society – cast simultaneously as both saviors and scapegoats within a white supremacist framework.

The tapestry work in code_anima prominently features selfies taken in mirrors – a choice that subverts the traditional modes of professional photography. These self-captured images reflect a more intimate, unmediated form of self-representation, challenging the polished, curated perfect image. By using the mirror as both a literal and metaphorical tool, these works question the nature of self-perception and external validation, emphasizing the fractured and often contradictory identities that Black women navigate. Embroidered embellishments, including the “Close Friends” icon from Instagram and the “For You” text from TikTok, offer the viewer an unfiltered peek “behind-the-scenes.”

In addition to social media, the work references erotic and fetish websites, such as Pornhub, to further discuss themes of desirability and consumption. This inclusion is crucial in order to confront the prevalent objectification within such spaces while reclaiming autonomy over the portrayal of Black femme bodies. These references serve to critique how societal values are projected onto bodies deemed “other” and explore the tension between visibility and exploitation. Other digital motifs include the use of memes, personal text messages, and designer bags, which punctuate the exhibition with both humor and poignancy.

The tufted works in code_anima explore Queer self-expression and the impact of racism in early childhood through tufted scenes of Barbie dolls. Stemming from my disappointment in the lack of LGBTQ+ representation in the 2023 film Barbie, the work examines how ongoing failures of inclusivity have psychological repercussions. The tuftings examine my own childhood relationship to innocence, whiteness, and sexuality by referencing my childhood memories spent playing with Barbie dolls. The work also references the Doll Test, a psychological study conducted by Dr. Kenneth and Mamie Clark (circa 1940s), which revealed the internalized racism and self-hatred that segregation and societal racism ingrained in young African-American children, who overwhelmingly choose white dolls over black dolls.

- QUALEASHA WOOD

ABOUT THE ARTIST

QUALEASHA WOOD

Qualeasha Wood (b. 1996 Long Branch, New Jersey) is a textile artist whose work contemplates realities around Black female embodiment that do and might exist. Inspired by a familial relationship to textiles, queer craft, Microsoft Paint, and internet avatars, Wood's tufted and tapestry pieces mesh traditional craft and contemporary technological materials. Thus, Qualeasha navigates both an internet environment saturated in Black Femme figures and culture, and a political and economic environment holding that embodiment at the margins.

While Wood's tapestries blend images from social media with religious, specifically Catholic, iconography, her 'tuftings' represent cartoon-like figures that recall the racist caricatures widespread in popular family programs of the early-mid-20th century and beyond. In these tuftings, Wood adopts a naïve aesthetic that calls on the nostalgia of cartoon animations and their association with racial stereotyping to unpack notions of Black girlhood. Despite their formal simplicity, the tuftings reveal a lurking tension drawn from the artist's own experiences of consuming media rife with anti-Black prejudice throughout her life. Where the tapestries are absorbed in consumption and cyber culture, the tuftings speak to inherited trauma and necessarily implicate accountability in the viewer.

Wood has exhibited at The Art Institute of Chicago; The Metropolitan Museum of Art (New York); Hauser and Wirth (New York, Los Angeles, and Somerset, UK); Kendra Jayne Patrick (New York); Pippy Houldsworth Gallery, (London); and more. Her work is held in institutional collections, such as The Metropolitan Museum of Art, as well as international private collections. Wood lives and works in Brooklyn and Philadelphia, and is represented by Gallery Kendra Jayne Patrick and Pippy Houldsworth Gallery.

Named for the volcanic rocks that blanket the Dakar shoreline, Black Rock Senegal is a multidisciplinary artist-in-residence program founded by renowned artist Kehinde Wiley in 2019. The residency brings together international artists to live and work in Dakar.

Inspired by Black Rock's proximity to the Atlantic Ocean, Becoming The Sea highlights 12 artists who participated in the first two years of the residency. The exhibition includes painting, photography, video, sculpture, writing, and installation. Becoming The Sea reflects the unique perspectives, techniques, culture, and traditions experienced by the artists during their time at Black Rock.

International artist residencies epitomize the essence of cultural exchange in the arts. They not only expand the horizons of the artists involved, but also strengthen the ties of a more inclusive Named for the volcanic rocks that blanket its shoreline, Black Rock Senegal is a multidisciplinary artist-in-residence program founded by artist Kehinde Wiley in 2019. To support new artistic creation through collaborative exchange, and to incite change in the global discourse about what Africa means today, the residency brings together international artists to live and work in Dakar, Senegal for 1-3 month stays. The residency spaces were conceived by Senegalese architect Abib Djenne with interior design collaboration between Wiley, Fatiya Djenne, and Aissa Dione. The residency is an invitation for artists to engage with Senegal's artists, history, traditions, and creativity. To date, Black Rock Senegal has welcomed more than 60 artists, from more than 15 countries.

About the Gantt

Harvey B. Gantt Center for African-American Arts + Culture is a multi-disciplinary arts institution located in the heart of Charlotte, North Carolina. Founded in 1974, the Gantt Center's mission is to present, preserve and celebrate excellence in the art, history and culture of African-Americans and those of African descent through visual and literary arts, dance music, film, educational programs, theatre productions and community outreach. The Gantt Center features fine art exhibitions from around the world and is home to the nationally celebrated John and Vivian Hewitt Collection of African-American Art, which was generously donated by Bank of America, and is accessible online.

Named for Charlotte civic leader and former mayor Harvey Bernard Gantt, the Gantt is housed in an iconic, award-winning structure designed by architect Philip Freelon, co-designer of the Smithsonian National Museum of African American History and Culture (NMAAHC).
